"Soundzabound"

Soundzabound Music Library was founded by educators in 1996. As visionaries, they could see the need for music as technology emerged in education. Along with the exciting possibilities, they could also sense the growing dangers of copyright compliance. With a video and technology background, the educators partnered with music professionals who shared the vision to become a part of this "marriage" that formed the corporation. Producers, songwriters, arrangers, studio owners, ASCAP members and copyright legal council accompanied the music department to begin producing high quality, educationally priced music which protects your site and system against copyright infringements.

Participants will learn to apply Media Permissions and Ethics, and properly apply and document the Fair Use guidelines for copyrighted material in this digital age. In this hands-on workshop you will learn to incorporate music and sounds into various applications, search for music, and use it to enhance your projects, presentations, podcasts and videos.
